

WHITE PAPERS

As the market leading experts on the built environment, Building is releasing its education white paper, due to be published immediately after the government's response to the James Review.

This executive briefing paper will offer the industry with a comprehensive guide to the education market in the UK over the next four years by looking to explain and analyse the government's new procurement policies for primary and secondary schools, academies and free schools including:

- In-depth interviews with local authorities, together with detailed information on school building conditions and pupil place shortages across the country.
- A detailed survey of more than 250 senior figures from leading construction firms in the education sector, local authorities and schools, revealing what clients' priorities are for their school buildings, and how well placed firms currently are to fulfil those needs.
- Key competitor analysis compares the services being offered by construction firms, analysing the types of solutions being developed, together with cost and sustainability information.
- Comprehensive data on education spending and project wins over the last three years. The data, supplied by Barbour ABI, ranks construction firms on their success in the education sector.

With this information clients, competitors and supply chain organisations will see where companies' strengths lie and identify potential partners in a market which, despite public spending cuts and increased competition, is set to provide a steady pipeline of work over the next four years and beyond.

Be first to receive your copy and pre-order today for £299 (+VAT) to guarantee you receive the Education White Paper on release.

To obtain your copy of this exclusive white paper contact Rinal Pandya on
T: 0207 955 3874 | E: Rinal.Pandya@ubm.com